The purpose of this task is to help your child:

- to use a scale map to measure distances – it involves estimating and measuring length in centimetres

Think about this:

- It's important that they use their ruler to measure accurately.
- Scale is written using a colon (:) like this, 1 centimetre: 1 kilometre.
- They might want to make a chart of the distances between places in kilometres.
- They'll probably want to talk about this with someone in your family (rather than with a classmate).

He tauira kōrero Māori:

Inea te tawhiti i te mahere mai i te tāone o Ani ki Ohiti. E hia mitarau (cm)?	Measure the distance on the map from Ani's town to Ohiti. How many centimetres is it?
Nō reira e hia manomita (km) te tawhiti i te whenua tūturu?	So how many kilometres is it on the actual ground?
Me pēhea te whakatakoto tika i te rūri hei ine i te tawhiti mai i te tāone o Ani ki Ohiti?	How do you put the ruler down in the correct place to measure the distance from Ani's town to Ohiti.
Me hāngai tonu te tohu mō te kore i te rūri ki te tāone o Ani, me te toro atu o te rūri ki Ohiti.	The mark for zero on the ruler should be in line with Ani's town, with the ruler stretching out to Ohiti.
Pānuihia te āwhata o te rūri i te wāhi e hāngai ana ki Ohiti. E hia mitarau (cm) te tawhiti?	Read the scale of the ruler at the place that is in line with Ohiti. How many centimetres is the distance?
